

October 13, 2005

Information Week Picks up on Supply Risk

Victory! Finally, IT executives are paying attention to supply risk and Spend Management. I came across this feature on Supply Risk in the October 10th Issue of Information week. The article reads like it might have been inspired by someone who is keeping up with Spend Matters: "In the past month and a half, hurricanes Katrina and Rita knocked many companies' supply chains completely offline. Suppliers had to close down facilities in the Gulf Coast region and wait out the storms, shipments couldn't make it to port, and railroads and roadways were blocked for days." Find out more here, as the piece is worth a good read. A quick parting thought for the day as I head off to meetings: I wonder if Corporate Ink, a great little PR boutique out of Boston, had anything to do with getting Information Week to pick up supply risk management ...

- Jason Busch

Posted At : 5:50 AM. | Posted By : admin | Link | Spend Management | Comments \(0\)